

Rhea Hubbard, OMB

Rhea Hubbard is a Senior Policy Analyst with the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), Office of Federal Financial Management (OFFM). She contributes to government-wide initiatives to improve Federal financial assistance policies, processes, and systems. In this role, she engages with relevant Government and non-Federal stakeholders on key issues to foster more efficient and effective Federal management.

Rhea joined the Federal government in as a Grants Management Specialist for the National Institutes of Health, where she had the opportunity to work directly with U.S. and international institutions of higher education recipients. She later joined Environmental Protection Agency as a Grants Policy Specialist, where she was responsible for writing, reviewing, and leading EPA assistance agreement related policies, projects, and initiatives.

Rhea has a Master of Public Policy Degree from American University and a Bachelor in Arts Degree in Psychology from the University of Missouri – Columbia.